

ANDY LEVINE

Andy serves as Chairman of Development Counsellors International (DCI), the leader in marketing places. Since 1960, DCI has worked with over 500 cities, regions, states and countries and has deep experience in the State of Pennsylvania.

As the son of DCI's Founder Ted Levine, Andy was introduced to the world of economic development marketing at birth. Since joining the firm in 1991, Andy has helped launch the company into a new era, advancing the quality of client work performed, growing the number of staff and adding to the range of client services offered. The company has a staff of 60 place-makers focused on attracting both investment and tourist dollars for our client communities. Andy is a contributor to Forbes.com, co-host of "The Project: Inside Corporate Location Decisions" podcast and a speaker at a wide range of economic development and tourism conferences.

Outside of his work with DCI, Andy launched a new podcast called Second Act Stories in March, 2018. Every two weeks, he profiles a gutsy individual pursuing a more rewarding life in a second act. Recent episodes include an a top trial lawyer who became a nature photographer, a telephone repairman who now designs women's shoes, an investment banker who transitioned to a public school teacher and an NFL defensive lineman who is now an opera singer. Second Act Stories is available on iTunes, Stitcher, Spotify, GooglePlus, iHeartRadio and from www.SecondActStories.org.

He has developed a special episode of the podcast focused on the Pittsburgh region's next act for the "Our Next 75 Summit."
